

Work Safety Alert Electrical Lighting Installation Work

1. Date of Accident : May 2012
2. Place of Accident : A construction site in Chek Lap Kok
3. Summary :

It is reported that an electrician, while conducting electrical lighting installation work at the ceiling of a building under construction, suspected to have received an electric shock and as a result, he fell from a stepladder and subsequently passed away.

4. Work Safety Alert for Contractors/Employers :

To avoid the hazards of electric shock and fall from height, contractors/employers undertaking electrical work should:

- ensure all live parts of the electrical system in relation to the electrical work are rendered dead by isolating the power supply source;
- turn off and lock out power supply source, and post up the appropriate warning notice, signs or tags before starting the electrical work;
- avoid the use of ladders and provide suitable scaffolds or working platforms for the electrical work at height;
- ensure workers at electrical work have received proper training and have the relevant knowledge and experience; and
- exercise adequate management control and effective supervision to ensure that the safety measures are strictly followed.
